62	Would really like to see various sport options in more parks in quicker timeline. For example, at Wilson park now, there are 3 baseball fields and only baseball - the park will enrich much more neighbors' life if there is a mix of sports fields/options like tennis, table tennis, badminton etc. More nature/environmental education and art elements can also be added. This will make a lot of fun visits to parks.		Vivian	Qyl168@hotm ail.com
61 Very little	Why's all the important information in tiny font in the appendix? When I ask questions parks and rec commissioners that made this plan say " it's in the appendix" This is a TERRIBLE master plan. No representation for East Cupertino, no representation from working mothers and fathers and the plan contains all information for things WE DO NOT NEED. Build parks and open Green space (on the ground not 50 stories up in the air that is NOT a park) are what the children need. Force Lawson and Segwick to open their gates to the public. Just like all of the people coming from outside our city to bash residents say, "open up and unlock the land." The schools belong to the residents. Lawson and Segwick cannot continue as they have we need a written agreement to open up their courts and fields. More funding must be allocated to East Cupertino. Disproportionately it has gone to the Monta Vista area. No more. The residents of Cupertino have spoken up and we have a mandate. ALL must be represented fairly. This plan is a slap in the face to those that value community engagement transparency and accountability.
60 I love that Cupertino takes such good care of parks .	I do not want a bathroom across from my house in three oaks park . We voted when the park was built to keep it a neighborhood parl		Lenore williams	Lenwilliams2@ earthlink.net

58 Anything updated that includes preserving the nature that we have in supporting community is good	I'm not deeply familiar with the plan outside of the video. My only thought is the interconnected aspect. I lived in Cleveland 20 years a go where they had a beltway which was fantastic (trail and cars). My concern here is that it could become a security issue allowing theft or violence to be more easily transferred between communities. Perhaps micro connected trails to dissuade that is a consideration			Msmasully@g mail.com
57 There is some recoginzation that east side of cupertino need more parks	There needs to be a actual concrete plan/route map on how to add parks to east side of Cupertino, namely the Rancho area, not just hope and dreams		Neal	gheewala114 @yahoo.com

	I mean know disrespect to the team that prepared the Plan. However, reading the Plan sparks more questions than solutions regarding how Cupertino will address park, recreation, and open space inequity across the City.	(1) Please add data that identifies how many people live within a 1/2 mile of each park. Please identify how many people are expected to be served per acre per park. For example if a park is 3 acres, how many people live within a 1/2 mile of the 3-acre park (no matter city of residence)? Give expected park user values in terms of residents-peracre. (2) Please provide within the body of the Master Plan an objective assessment of each park and amenities. For example, how many restrooms? When were the restrooms last renovated? How many picnic tables? When were the picnic areas last renovated? Play equipment? Walking/mixed use paths? Other? (3) Please consider upgrading Library Field status from "field" to "park". The community values Library Field, as it is in near constant use for cricket, pick-up soccer, volleyball, and field play. Library Field needs to be recognized and protected for the utility it offers the community.	I'd like to see better outreach to residents regarding the Parks and Recreation Master Plan. It seems the Plan includes big ticket items, yet relatively few residents contributed to the data set that informed the Plan. Without broad community support, where will the money come from to build the items suggested in the Plan. If Cupertino were to add a 200-600 seat performing arts center, who will pay for it? Does use of nearby performing arts centers indicate demand for Cupertino to have its own center, replacing Flint Center? Similar questions and concerns with a new aquatics center: are there opportunities to leverage/subsidize existing pool facilities as a means of meeting current and future aquatic needs and interests? It seems Cupertino needs incremental improvements and increased parkland acreage today, especially in eastern neighborhoods and as a higher priority than distant future, non-park capital	Liana Crabtree	lianacrabtree @yahoo.com
55	All of it. The I believe 7 main points are masterfully done. Sustainability and protection of ecosystems connecting the parks and the idea to make them all accessible equally to everybody instead of for instance all the nice bike paths and connections to larger walking paths all are in the wealthy neighborhoods (like they so often are.) It's well done and even attempts to address getting kids outside because we have in my opinion an epidemic of oversupervised children who don't get enough outside time with thier peers.	When you charge people those who need it the most often don't and can't go. It also takes away a lot of the casual enjoyability of outdoor activities which should remain as they always have since as long as humans can remember; just something you go do. So I would say to make it a clear point not to as so many cities have done a decent job of their master plan but forgot this little point and too many well-off city planners don't understand the sociology behind it and implemented fee's the average people simply can't afford. On that note I would like to see a firm edition of insurance free zones where people can just be human without having to literally give our allegiance to the whims of insurance companies and litigation. Obviously this one is a challenge but since you guys asked Most important it would be nice to see more parks and playgrounds open later so that 9-5 working people and kids can use them after school. Especially in winter. Last but not least please put in there	lot more fun when an area is less manicured just well taken care of. ( it's also much cheaper to maintain and is consistent with what it seems you guys are trying to do) I would love to see some just beautiful native parks with maybe a little bit of grassland where people can throw frisbees or have a little family soccer game. Super low maintenance and just not a lot going on except just enjoy the space. In other words as natural as possible but not specifically for hiking. Old orchards and the whatnot make great places for kids to play things like capture the flag. On the same subject it would be nice if Cupertino had a place where people can have family reunions, anniversaries and	Jey	Patterwigis@g mail.com
